STATISTICS OF LABOR—1918.

PREFATORY NOTE.

This volume constitutes the Forty-ninth Annual Report on the Statistics of Labor for Massachusetts, and consists of four parts which have been issued by this Bureau as Labor Bulletins Nos. 123-126, respectively. All of the publications of the Labor Division of the Bureau, with the exception of the Quarterly Reports on Employment, are first published as "Labor Bulletins," and a certain number of copies are then set aside for binding and publication at the end of the year under the title of the "Annual Report on the Statistics of Labor." The subject matter of the several parts, or bulletins, issued in 1918 may be briefly described as follows:

PART I. SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL DIRECTORY OF LABOR ORGANIZATIONS IN MASSACHUSETTS, 1918. (Labor Bulletin No. 123.) This directory contains the name, location, place of meeting, and the name and address of the secretary and of the business agent of each labor organization having its headquarters in Massachusetts, together with a list of all of the national and international organizations having one or more affiliated local unions in the United States, and the names and addresses of their respective secretaries, in so far as these data could be ascertained.

PART II. EIGHTH ANNUAL REPORT ON UNION SCALE OF WAGES AND HOURS OF LABOR IN MASSACHUSETTS, 1917. (Labor Bulletin No. 124.) The information presented in this report was obtained principally from local trade unions in the Commonwealth whose members were known to be working under a time-rate system. The authority for the data presented in this report was derived in most cases from information furnished by organizations of employees. Exceptions, however, appear in the case of employees in the steam and electric railway service and in telephone, telegraph, and federal service, regarding whom the necessary information was obtained from wage scales furnished for the most part by the employers. To some extent information was also obtained from employers in order to supplement or confirm the data obtained from trade union officials. Except where otherwise specifically mentioned, the data were as of the date, July 1, 1917.

PART III. LABOR LEGISLATION IN MASSACHUSETTS, 1918. (Labor Bulletin No. 125.) This part of the report is a compilation of the text of the laws relative to labor, broadly defined, enacted by the Legislature of Massachusetts during the session of 1918, and is intended to serve as a supplement to Labor Bulletins Nos. 104 and 122, which contained the labor legislation of prior years.¹ Certain other matter having a direct bearing upon the labor legislation of 1918 is also included in this part of the report.

PART IV. STATISTICS OF LABOR ORGANIZATIONS IN MASSACHUSETTS, 1916 AND 1917. (Labor Bulletin No. 126.) The data presented in this report have reference principally to the number and membership of labor organizations in existence in the Commonwealth at the close of 1916 and of 1917, and the unemployment of organized wage-earners at the close of each quarter in these two years, data for the eight years, 1908 to 1915, inclusive, having also been presented for comparative purposes. Three graphic charts are included in the report — the first showing the fluctuations in the number and membership of labor organizations in Massachusetts during the ten-year period, 1908-1917, the second showing the fluctuations in unemployment of organized wage-earners in the United Kingdom, Germany, New York State, and Massachusetts during the ten-year period, and the third showing the fluctuations in unemployment of organized wage-earners in the six principal industries in Massachusetts during the same period.

In addition to the reports discussed above, four quarterly reports relative to "Employment in Massachusetts" (16 pages each) have also been issued during the fiscal year, but as these reports were primarily of current interest they have not been included as parts of this volume.

A considerable portion of the work of the Labor Division during the fiscal year ending November 30, 1918, has consisted in the answering of numerous inquiries relative to industrial conditions in this State, necessitating in some instances special research and investigation, the results of which, however, have not been published in the reports of the Division. The number of such inquiries has greatly increased during recent months as a direct result of war conditions. For the most part these inquiries have had reference to the relative increases in wages and the cost of living since the outbreak of the war in 1914. The furnishing of data of this character to be used in the adjustment of wage disputes is unquestionably an important branch of the work of this Division, and particular attention has been given, therefore, to the answering of inquiries of this nature, and full opportunity has been afforded those who have made inquiry in person to consult the current reports on industrial subjects, copies of many of which have been secured for reference purposes and have been catalogued and filed in the Library of the Bureau. During the latter part of the year the Chief of the Division was also in immediate charge of the work of securing information relative to the operation of the so-called "Compulsory Work Law."

The several parts of the present report have been prepared under the immediate supervision of Mr. Roswell F. Phelps, Chief of the Labor Division of this Bureau. Part III, entitled "Labor Legislation in Massachusetts, 1918" was prepared by Mr. Frederick J. de Sloovere, formerly Legal Assistant in the Labor Division, whose services were secured for this branch of the work, although he was not a regular member of the Bureau staff. Mr. Steven P. Foster, who was appointed Assistant to the Chief of the Labor Division in January, 1917, was granted indefinite leave of absence in February, 1918, on account of his being inducted into military service. In the absence of the Assistant, Miss Susan R. Nash has served very acceptably in that capacity, and has had immediate charge of a special investigation relative to "Wages and Hours in the Metal Trades, 1914-1918", to which the greater portion of her time has been devoted in directing the field work and the tabulation of the returns.

SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL

DIRECTORY OF LABOR ORGANIZATIONS

MASSACHUSETTS

1918

(ISSUED AS LABOR BULLETIN No. 123)

[1 Pt. I.]

SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL
DIRECTORY OF LABOR ORGANIZATIONS IN MASSACHUSETTS, 1918.

INTRODUCTION.

The matter presented herewith constitutes the Seventeenth Annual Directory of Labor Organizations in Massachusetts,¹ the first directory of this character having been published by this Bureau in August, 1902.

The present edition consists of four divisions, as follows:

(I.) "National and International Organizations," having one or more affiliated local unions in the United States (page 5);

(II.) "State, District, and Trades Councils," consisting of organizations composed of delegates from local organizations within a particular trade or group of trades, or within a definite district comprising more than a single city or town (page 9);

(III.) "Central Labor Unions and Local Councils," composed of delegates from local unions in the same locality (page 12);

(IV.) "Local Trade Unions," composed of wage-earners in a single locality directly associated in what may be called the "unit body" of organization (page 16).

Since issuing the Directory in 1917, careful records have been kept, as heretofore, of all changes in meeting places, secretaries, and other information pertinent to the subject. Schedules were sent in December, 1917, to all of the National and International Unions in the United States requesting a list of their affiliated locals in Massachusetts, together with the names and addresses of the respective local secretaries, and similar schedules were sent to all State, District, and Trades Councils and Central Labor Unions and Local Councils. The Bureau has been able, by these means, and also by a careful consideration of rosters issued by labor organizations and of newspaper clippings relative to organizations in the

Commonwealth, to secure information with reference to the organization of new unions, the disbanding of those formerly existing, and changes in the data relative to organizations previously listed.

A schedule of inquiries, among which were certain inquiries which had special reference to this edition of the directory, was mailed on December 31, 1917, to each local union in Massachusetts known to be in existence.¹ Schedules were received by mail directly or were obtained by special agents of the Bureau from nearly all of the organizations listed in this edition. In the remaining cases, the desired information has been obtained from the secretary of the National or International organization with which the local organization is affiliated, or from some other reliable source.

Owing to the fact that the collection of returns and the preparation and printing of the directory necessarily cover a period of several weeks, some changes have no doubt occurred since the information herein presented was obtained; consequently those who have occasion to consult this directory should bear this fact in mind. Local secretaries are urged to send notice of any change in the particulars published herein concerning the organizations with which they may be connected.

In the preparation of this edition of the directory the Bureau has been fortunate in securing the cordial co-operation of the labor officials with whom it has had occasion to communicate.

UNION SCALE OF WAGES AND HOURS OF LABOR IN MASSACHUSETTS, 1917.

INTRODUCTION.

This report is the eighth of a series of annual reports issued by this Bureau relative to the time-rates of wages and hours of labor prevailing in the organized industries and trades in Massachusetts.¹ The data herein presented were obtained principally as of the date July 1, 1917, at which time schedules of inquiry were sent, with few exceptions, to all of the local trade unions in the Commonwealth whose members were known to be working under a time-rate system.

In certain industries and trades, such as the boot and shoe industry, the textile industry, the metal trades, and the clothing trades, wages are paid on a piece-rate basis, but the piece-rates quoted are so numerous and the units of payment are so diverse that it has not seemed advisable to include them in this report. In those instances where organized workmen have endeavored to establish in an industry or trade a union scale of wages and hours of labor, but without any fair degree of success, such proposed scales have been omitted from this report. On the other hand, wherever, in any locality, a definite scale of wages and hours of labor has actually become effective in a strongly organized industry or trade, although it may not have been the subject of a formal, signed agreement between employers and employees, such scale has been included in this report.

The term "time-rates of wages", as used in this report, signifies the wages agreed upon in return for services for a specified period, e.g., an hour, day, week, etc., and should not be confounded with actual earnings, since the earnings of employees depend both upon the rates of wages paid them and upon the continuity of their employment. The rates of wages

1910 (October 1). Part I of the Forty-first Annual Report on the Statistics of Labor.

1911 (October 1). Labor Bulletin No. 91.

1912 (October 1). Labor Bulletin No. 96.

1913 (October 1). Labor Bulletin No. 97.

1914 (July 1). Labor Bulletin No. 107.

1915 (October 1). Labor Bulletins Nos. 114 and 115.

1916 (July 1). Labor Bulletin No. 120.

serve chiefly to show, by comparison with rates published in earlier reports, the upward or downward trend of wages. Although the rate of wages may increase during a specified period, a scarcity of work may effect even a reduction in the actual earnings during that period, while, on the other hand, an abundance of work, by making possible overtime employment or by reducing the amount of unemployment, may have a favorable effect upon the actual earnings even though the rate of wages may have remained unchanged. Again, in the case of employees receiving a daily rate, the working hours per day may be reduced, thereby increasing the rate per hour, but leaving the actual daily wages unchanged. Likewise, the granting of a weekly half-holiday, without loss of wages, effects an increase in the hourly rate of wages while the actual weekly earnings remain the same. The recent great demand for workmen, particularly at the shipyards and in the machine shops and metal trades establishments, has made it possible for many workmen, both organized and unorganized, to command wages considerably in excess of the standard union rates which, under normal conditions, would prevail in the several localities. Usually, however, the union scale has been retained as the standard, while the employees receive additional compensation in the form of efficiency, service, and night bonuses, premiums, and overtime payments at rates in excess of those paid for work during the regular working hours.

Time-rates are calculated in various ways, but generally by the hour, day, or week. Thus, in the building trades, the wages are generally calculated by the hour, while in most mills and factories a weekly rate prevails. In this report the rate or unit shown is that reported by the union to this Bureau. In some cases the organizations have returned a rate per hour, per day, and week, as well as an overtime and a Sunday rate, thus indicating that each rate has been established among their members. In other cases a rate for only one period has been returned, i.e., for an hour or for a day, and in such cases only the rate returned has been entered in this report, for the reason that the daily or weekly rates may not, in many instances, be computed accurately on the basis of the hourly rates. Frequently the agreements between employers and labor organizations contain clauses to the effect that workmen commencing work shall be paid for at least one-half day even though the hours actually worked may amount to less than one-half day.

The "union scale" establishes merely a minimum rate, less than which members are not supposed to accept, and a maximum number of hours, in excess of which they may not work at the regular rate of pay, and in most cases members are liable to definite penalties for violations of such union rules. In some localities and in certain trades workmen receive more than the prescribed minimum rate and in some instances employees work less than the prescribed maximum number of hours, such variations being generally the result of individual negotiations which are determined by special qualifications of the individual employee or by the peculiar conditions existing in any single trade or establishment. Agreements sometimes provide that old and infirm employees may work for less than the union scale. Except where otherwise noted, this report has reference only to the minimum rates of wages and maximum number of hours which have become effective in the various organized trades, and does not purport to show the extent to which there may be individual variations from the established scales.

The authority for the data presented in this report has been derived in most cases from information furnished by organizations of employees. Exceptions appear, however, in the case of employees in the steam and electric railway service and in telephone, telegraph, and federal service, regarding whom the necessary information was obtained from wage scales furnished for the most part by the employers.

Of the 1,578 local unions known to be in existence in Massachusetts on July 1, 1917, 896, having an aggregate membership of 129,641, are directly represented in these returns, and in addition to this number of organized workmen directly represented, large numbers of employees in steam and electric railway service and telephone, telegraph, and federal service, including both organized and unorganized employees, are represented by data furnished by their employers.

The preparation of this report has involved much correspondence with the officers of the various labor organizations in this Commonwealth and also a considerable amount of field work on the part of representatives of this Bureau. To some extent, also, it has been necessary to confer with the employers in order to supplement or confirm the data obtained from trade union officials. Almost invariably a spirit of hearty co-operation has been manifested by those whom it has been necessary to consult.

² In localities where a barber is allowed a specified number of hours as a half-holiday each week, but on no stated day, the number of hours worked on a half-holiday varies according to the length of the day on which he takes such half-holiday. For example, if 5 hours is the time allowed as a half-holiday, and a barber takes it on a 10-hour day, he works on that day 5 hours, whereas if he takes it on an 11-hour day, he works 6 hours on that day.

⁴ Have two half-holidays weekly; one on Thursday, one on another day, not stated.

⁵ Prevailing rate; no agreement establishing a minimum.

⁶ Hours specified in agreement; in majority of shops men start work one-half hour later, making weekly hours 62.

⁷ Rate specified in agreement; majority of employees receive $15 or $16 a week and a percentage of receipts over certain amounts.

⁸ On August 6, 1917, hours of labor for Saturday were reduced to 12¾.

Telephone Employees.

General Note. — The data with reference to telephone employees were compiled from information furnished by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company as of July 1, 1917. In December, 1917, and again in February and March, 1918, the schedules of rates were revised, the changes representing in most instances advances in wages.

The rates shown on page 86 apply to all employees of the Company covered by the several schedules, irrespective of their connection with unions of their craft. In each of the following municipalities there is an organization of telephone operators: — Boston (also an organization of clerical telephone employees), Brockton, Concord, Fall River, Fitchburg, Framingham, Haverhill, Lawrence, Lowell, Lynn, New Bedford, Newburyport, North Adams, Pittsfield (including Great Barrington), Salem, Springfield, Taunton, and Worcester.

The exchanges were classified in five groups and a different wage schedule has been adopted for each group of exchanges. The exchanges in Massachusetts to which the several schedules apply are as follows:

Schedule A, Boston, Metropolitan Division
Brockton.	Holyoke.	Lynn.	Salem.
Fall River.	Lawrence.	New Bedford.	Springfield.
Haverhill.	Lowell.	Pittsfield.	Worcester.

The hours of labor for clerks are usually 48 per week (six days of eight hours each) and for operators range from 32 to 48 per week, varying according to exchanges and time of assignment. Student operators, operators, senior operators, and supervisors assigned to forenoon-evening or afternoon-evening trips are paid $1.00 more per week than day employees of corresponding service. Operators on "light, second half" assignments (10 p.m. to 7 a.m.) are paid $2.00 per week more than day operators of corresponding service. Operators on "half night" assignments (10 p.m. to 7 a.m., sleeping 12.00 to 6 a.m.) are paid at the rate of day operators up to a maximum of $10.00 (class B), $9.50 (class C), and $8.50 (class D). Operators are paid at the rate of time and one-half for overtime and Sundays and double time for holidays. Part-time operators receive $0.15 per hour on assignment, $0.16 at end of three months, $0.17 at end of six months, and $0.18 at end of 12 months.

Wages are paid by the performance, by the day, or by the week, regardless of the number of hours worked. The three rates in the different localities are shown, where possible, but have no connection with each other, although entered on the same line for convenience.

² Overtime is any time worked before hour set for reporting at theatre, or after stage has been cleared after performance, or work on Sunday. Rates, when expressed in terms of money, represent rates per hour. Symbols signify as follows: Reg.=Regular time; 1¹/₂ T.=One and one-half time; 2 T.=Double time.

³ On September 1, 1917, rate was increased $3 a week.

⁴ On September 1, 1917, rate was increased to $1 an hour.

⁵ For work on Sunday.

⁶ Rate effective September 1, 1917; former rate not stated.

⁷ On holidays, regular rate; on Sundays, double time.

⁸ Same rates apply in Framingham, Natick, and Newton.

⁹ On Sunday, double time, except regular rate when putting on show.

¹⁰ Per morning of 3 hours or less, 75 cents.

C. STEAM AND ELECTRIC RAILWAY SERVICE.

STEAM RAILROAD SERVICE.

Introductory Note.—The information presented in the following table (Table 16) has reference to those occupations, only, which are peculiar to railroad service and which relate primarily to the operation of trains. The rates of wages and hours of labor as in effect on July 1, 1917, appear in the table. Certain general changes which have taken place since that date have been discussed in notes accompanying the respective groups of occupations to which they severally refer.

Special attention should be called to the fact that the hours of labor and the overtime and emergency rates of pay in the case of employees engaged in the operation of trains were adjusted, in accordance with the provisions of the so-called "Adams-on Act." This act, passed by Congress early in September, 1916, provided, in brief, that, beginning January 1, 1917, eight hours should be deemed the standard or measure of a day's work, for the purpose of reckoning the compensation of all employees engaged in the operation of trains (with certain specified exceptions).

It is the custom of the steam railroad companies operating within this Commonwealth to issue from time to time printed "Rules," applicable to employees in the several branches of service, showing the rates of pay, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment. These printed rules virtually constitute written agreements between the companies and their employees. Owing to the varying nature of the several branches of service it is exceedingly difficult to present in one uniform tabular statement the essential items of information contained in these schedules. Thus, conductors, trainmen, locomotive engineers, and locomotive firemen receive compensation based on mileage covered, but certain minimum rates of wages an hour, day, or month are guaranteed. For employees engaged in station and other local service the rates of pay and hours of labor vary according to local conditions. The hours of labor of those who are actually employed in the movement of trains, including conductors, locomotive engineers, locomotive firemen, trainmen, and telegraph operators, are regulated by the Federal law applicable to that class of service.

In view of the foregoing considerations it was deemed advisable to present the information in a series of tabular statements, each of which has been so devised as to bring out the essential facts with reference to the several occupations considered therein. Data with reference to steam railroad employees are presented for four railway systems operated in part or wholly in Massachusetts, designated by capital letters as follows: (A) Boston and Albany Railroad, (B) New York, New Haven, and Hartford Railroad, (C) Boston and Maine Railroad, and (D) Boston, Revere Beach, and Lynn Railroad. It will be observed that the rates of pay and hours of labor applicable to employees in train and yard service are quite uniform for three of the railroad systems considered. Attention is called to the fact that the rates of pay and hours of labor applicable to railroad employees are not confined merely to those portions of the several railroad systems which are within the confines of the Commonwealth, but are applicable likewise throughout the entire systems.

On Railroad A the rate for emergency service is one-half day's pay for less than four hours and not less than a day's pay for over four hours.

On Railroad B rate for emergency service of more than 30 minutes and less than two hours is paid on an hourly basis, 60 minutes or less to count as one hour; service of less than four hours or less than one-half of daily mileage—rate is one-half day's pay; over four hours or more than one-half daily mileage—rate is full day's pay.

On Railroad C rate for emergency service of 12½ miles or less or one hour or less is as for 12½ miles; over one hour or over 12½ miles but less than four hours or less than 50 miles is as for 50 miles; over four hours or over 50 miles is a day's pay.

³ Weekly rate; on July 26, 1917, rate was increased to $18.25.

⁴ On July 26, 1917, hours were reduced to 8 a day.

⁵ Weekly rate; on July 26, 1917, rate was increased to $17.

⁶ Hourly rates; paid different rates according to location of yard.

On Railroad C, emergency service (extra work required between regular laid-out day trips or before registering off duty) payment for 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles is allowed for less than 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles, or less than one hour's work; payment for 50 miles is allowed for over 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles and less than 50 miles, or for over one hour and less than 4 hours; a day's pay is allowed for 50 miles or over, or for 4 hours or over. For emergency service in making locomotive repairs, payment is for one hour when employed less than an hour; 4 hours for over one hour but less than 4 hours, and one day's pay for over 4 hours and up to 8 hours. Passenger engineers who are required to heat trains, who repair engines at points where no men are employed for the purpose, or perform other extra service for which extra time is agreed to be paid, are paid 50 cents an hour. In switching service 29 minutes or less are not counted in paying overtime. For over 29 minutes payment is for one hour; for over one hour and less than 4 hours, payment is for 4 hours; for 4 hours or over, one day's pay.

Railroad A.—Regular maintenance men in charge of large plants or sections are paid for 7 days a week, but work only 8 hours on Sunday. Construction men work 6 days a week and are paid time and one-half for all overtime. When regular maintenance men work with construction men on Sundays, during extensive repairs, they receive time and one-half.

Railroad B.—Time and one-quarter is paid for overtime on Sundays, July Fourth, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas Day up to 6 p.m.; time and one-half thereafter. On other days regular rate is paid up to 8 p.m.; and time and one-half thereafter. When called out at night, time and one-half is paid.

On Railroad B the hours of labor were changed in June, 1917; for 6-day men, 9½ hours on 5 days and 8 hours on Saturday; for 7-day men the same hours on 6 days and 8 hours on Sunday; all to be paid for 10 hours a day and all overtime at the rate of time and one-half.

Railroad C.—Regular maintenance men are paid time and one-half for all emergency work due to conditions over which they have no control, such as accidents, breakages, or climatic conditions. Construction men are paid time and one-half for all overtime.

² Rate was increased 35 cents a day on October 27, 1917.

³ Minimum rate was increased to $9.70 and maximum rate to $27.95 a week on November 24, 1917.

⁴ Rate was increased 6 per cent. on August 18, 1917, and 5 per cent. on November 17, 1917.

⁵ Rate was increased to $3.93 on October 27, 1917.

⁶ Rate was increased to $30.50 on October 27, 1917.

⁷ Rate was increased 45 cents a day on October 27, 1917.

LABOR LEGISLATION IN MASSACHUSETTS IN 1918.

INTRODUCTORY.

This bulletin contains the text of the laws relative to labor, broadly defined, enacted by the Legislature of Massachusetts during the session of 1918, and also certain other matter, described below, having a direct bearing upon the labor legislation of the year. The plan of presentation here adopted is similar to that followed in compiling earlier bulletins on the subject of labor legislation in this State, and it is intended that the present bulletin shall serve as a supplement to Labor Bulletins Nos. 104 and 122, which contained the labor legislation of prior years.¹

In the first main division of this bulletin will be found the text of the labor legislation enacted by the Legislature in 1918. The more important measures passed during the session are briefly discussed in the following paragraphs.

War Measures. — Of the important measures enacted during the year, four had specific reference to conditions resulting from the war. The so-called "Compulsory Work Law" (Gen. Acts, Chap. 286) provided that thirty days after the issuance of a proclamation by the Governor "that the employment of all men able to work is necessary for the public protection and welfare";² and thereafter until the termination of the war or until such proclamation shall have been withdrawn, "it shall be the duty of every male resident of the Commonwealth, who is able to work and who is between the ages of eighteen and fifty years, to engage in and to pursue some regular, useful occupation for at least thirty-six hours per week, and to comply with the provisions of this act relative to registration." Provision was made for preserving the Civil Service standing in this State of persons in the military or naval service of the United States, and for their reinstatement in the public service in Massachusetts within one year after their honorable discharge from such military or naval service (Gen. Acts, Chap. 160). Cities and towns were authorized to fill by temporary appointment the places of municipal officers engaged in military or naval service (Gen. Acts, Chap. 185). The State Board of Education was directed to establish a division for the training and instruction of disabled soldiers and sailors (Gen. Acts, Chap. 230). Several acts considered in a later paragraph under "Industrial Education" may also be considered as in the nature of war measures, although not wholly such.

Women and Children. — The so-called "fifty-four hour law" was made applicable to women and minors employed in the operation of elevators (Gen. Acts, Chap. 147). The law governing the employment of minors in street trades was amended so as to provide that in cities the school committee should be empowered to make regulations governing the employment in street trades of girls under eighteen years of age and of boys under the age of sixteen years, and the law governing the employment of minors by hawkers and peddlers was further amended (Gen. Acts, Chap. 257, §§ 263, 264).

¹ Labor Bulletin No. 104, entitled "Handbook of the Labor Laws of Massachusetts," contained the labor legislation in effect at the close of the session in 1914, and Labor Bulletin No. 122 included the legislation pertaining to labor, enacted at the sessions in 1915, 1916, and 1917, with the exception of those provisions which were no longer effective at the close of the session of 1917.

² A proclamation to this effect was issued on June 12, 1918, and the act became operative on July 12, 1918. The proclamation was withdrawn on November 20, 1918, nine days after the signing of the armistice.

Industrial Safety and Sanitation. — An earlier statute relative to the provision of surgical and medical chests in factories was amended by the addition of a clause further providing that suitable and sanitary facilities for heating or warming food to be consumed by those employees who so desire should be provided in establishments in which one hundred or more persons are employed (Gen. Acts, Chap. 110).

Workmen's Compensation and Insurance. — The minimum weekly compensation payable to injured employees under the Workmen's Compensation Act was increased from four dollars to five dollars (Gen. Acts, Chap. 113). The law relative to the making of claims for compensation was amended so as to provide that such claims should not be held invalid because of unintentional inaccuracies therein, or because of the failure to make such claims within a prescribed period (Gen. Acts, Chap. 119). Provision was made for the issuance of insurance policies covering groups of employees (Gen. Acts, Chaps. 112 and 216) and an appropriation was provided "for the purpose of further encouraging and promoting old age annuities and the organization of mutual benefit associations among the employees in industrial plants in the Commonwealth in order to afford them an opportunity to insure against sickness and disability" (Res., Chap. 70).

Wages. — The law providing for the weekly payment of wages to employees in certain establishments was amended so as to apply to employees of clubs (Gen. Acts, Chap. 87). It was made unlawful for employers, either directly or indirectly, to accept or receive any gratuity given to their employees for the checking of clothing (Gen. Acts, Chap. 149). Deductions from wages of employees on account of tardiness, of a sum "in excess of the proportionate wage which would have been earned during the time actually lost," were prohibited (Gen. Acts, Chap. 192). The following acts referred specifically to the wages of large groups of public employees: An act providing for the classification and grading by the Supervisor of Administration of all appointive offices and positions in the government of the Commonwealth, except those in the judicial and legislative branches (Gen. Acts, Chap. 228); an act providing for an investigation by the Supervisor of Administration of the working conditions, duties, and compensation of the officials and employees of the Commonwealth and of the several counties, with certain exceptions (Res., Chap. 86); and an act establishing $550 as the minimum annual salary of public school teachers in the Commonwealth, except in certain instances (Gen. Acts, Chap. 197). Several other acts had reference to the compensation and fees payable to small groups of employees and individuals.

Public Employment. — In addition to the legislation having reference to the compensation of public employees, discussed in the preceding paragraph, there was a rather large number of measures affecting public employees passed, which, while affecting only small groups of employees, were important when considered collectively, because the very number indicated that to the Legislature is being delegated, to an increasing extent, the function of regulating the hours of labor and working conditions of public employees and of establishing their status. In a number of instances municipal and other officials were made subject to civil service regulations, and in several instances the hours of labor and other conditions of employment of certain groups and individuals in the public service were established by specific enactments. Under this caption reference may also be made to the numerous acts revising in certain particulars the several pension and retirement systems established for the benefit of employees in various branches of the public service.

Industrial Education.—The legislation with reference to industrial education was of special significance because of the extraordinary demands made upon productive labor by reason of the war. The measures passed were evidently intended, first of all, to meet the exigency of the time. Thus the restrictions formerly imposed, according to which instruction in industrial, agricultural and household art schools should be given only to persons employed during the day in work to which the instruction so given applies and only to persons under twenty-five years of age, were removed for the period of the war and for one year thereafter, and during that time such instruction might be given "to any pupils for whom it would be profitable" (Gen. Acts, Chap. 206). Larger powers were granted to cities in the matter of providing instruction in agriculture and related subjects (Gen. Acts, Chap. 257, § 183). Provision was made for the participation of counties in extension work in agriculture, home-making and country life, and cities and towns were authorized to acquire land for the purpose of demonstration work in agriculture and home-making (Gen. Acts, Chap. 273). Reference has already been made under "War Measures," above, to the act providing for the establishment by the State Board of Education of a division for the training and instruction of disabled soldiers and sailors (Gen. Acts, Chap. 230). A similar act, although not a war measure, provided for the establishment in the Industrial Accident Board of a division for directing the training of employees who have become crippled or otherwise handicapped by accidents in the course of their employment (Gen. Acts, Chap. 231). Four acts provided, respectively, for the control and maintenance by the State of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, and of the textile schools in New Bedford, Fall River, and Lowell (Gen. Acts, Chaps. 246, 248, 262, and 274), and by another act the city of Northampton was authorized to assume control of Smith's Agricultural School (Sp. Acts, Chap. 151).

Other Measures.—The laws with reference to liens for labor, licensed occupations (hawkers and pedlers and electricians), Sunday labor and prison labor were amended in certain particulars, but such amendments were largely corrective in character and added no distinctively new features to any of these laws.

In this bulletin, as in Bulletins Nos. 104 and 122, to which it is supplementary, the several enactments have been classified by subjects rather than by chapter numbers in order that the legislation on any particular subject may be more readily accessible. In the preparation of such classification it has been necessary to re-arrange to some extent the various acts, chapters, sections, and even parts of sections, by transferring or omitting certain words, phrases, and clauses and by inserting certain matter in order to make the context clear. Each enactment amending an earlier enactment has been given the same paragraph number assigned to the earlier enactment in the earlier bulletins on this subject, and those specific words, phrases, etc., which are merely in the nature of amendments have been set in italics so that the effect of the amendment may be readily observed. For purposes of conciseness certain phrases, which for present purposes are non-essential, have been omitted, such omissions being indicated by leaders, thus: Wherever any insertion, for the purposes of correlation or explanation, has been made, such insertion has been enclosed in brackets, thus: []. Citations of sections printed in this supplement are given in italic type, enclosed in brackets, at the end of each paragraph, thus: [Gen. Acts, 1918, c. 257, § 478], to indicate where may be found, in the official edition of the Revised Laws or of the Acts and Resolves, the complete text of the sections here presented. Such citations usually include the amendments to the section during the last four years, in addition to its original date of enactment, with the chapter number, wherever such original act has not been repealed.

For the purpose of avoiding a considerable amount of repetition, those sections, the text of which permits of more than one classification, have generally been placed where it was deemed they were most pertinent. In a few instances, however, it was considered advisable to repeat or refer to such section under another caption.

Certain acts passed during the legislative session of 1918 which did not specifically amend any part of the text of the law as published in the earlier bulletins bear, nevertheless, closely upon the subject matter contained therein. In such cases the text of the law has been given the same paragraph number as that in the earlier bulletins to which it most nearly corresponds, accompanied, however, by a capital letter A, B, etc., indicating that such paragraph, while not amending the original paragraph, is supplementary thereto. In other words, these sections have been so designated as to correlate them with the corresponding sections in the earlier bulletins bearing most nearly on the subject matter of the new legislation. All sections stating that an act "shall take effect upon its passage" have been omitted, but those sections which state that the act shall take effect upon a definite date other than that of its passage have been included.

Under "Administrative Provisions" have been printed certain provisions of the laws governing the various State boards and commissions which are more directly concerned with the subject of labor. Special legislation affecting a particular city or town, wherever significant as a labor measure, has been included; especially is this true of provisions relative to the extension of the civil service.

The second main division of this bulletin consists of an index, in tabular form, to the numerous bills affecting labor which were introduced during the legislative session of 1918, and in this index information is given with reference to the more important stages through which the several bills passed, namely, the committee to which referred, the report of such committee, the final disposition of the bill, and, if enacted, the chapter number assigned thereto, in order that the reader may observe at a glance the principal action taken thereon by the Legislature. Certain bills having merely a general bearing on the subject of labor have been included in this index, but the actual text of the final enactments has been omitted from the first division of this bulletin for the reason that the matter was not deemed of sufficient significance as a labor measure to justify its being printed in full. All bills appropriating money for the use of an administrative body and all bills affecting designated individuals only have been excluded.

The total number of acts and resolves passed during the session which may properly be classified as labor measures was 84 (57 General Acts, 18 Special Acts, and 9 Resolves). Included in this number was General Acts, Chapter 257, which amended and revised many of the Laws of the Commonwealth, and among its 478 sections there were 75 which amended the earlier labor laws in many respects. If these 75 sections are considered as separate enactments, the total number of distinct labor enactments during the year would be 158. Of the 2,051 bills of all kinds introduced during the session, 435, or more than one-fifth, may be classed as labor bills. These facts indicate the extent to which the attention of the Legislature was directed toward the consideration of labor matters in the Commonwealth.

In the third division of this bulletin have been reprinted those portions of the Governor's address containing recommendations concerning labor, and which covered in general the following matters: The shortage of labor, workmen's compensation, industrial health insurance, continuation schools, and vocational education.

A table showing the disposition of statutes cited in the text of the acts passed during the legislative session of 1918 is appended. By means of this table one may readily locate by number any specific act or section appearing in this bulletin.

The index appended hereto should serve as a means of readily locating, by subject, any act or section passed during the year, regardless of its classification in this compilation.

[Gen. Acts, 1918, c. 112, § 1.]

(b) Forms of policies to be approved by the insurance commissioner; certain provisions necessary. — On and after July 1, 1918, no policy of group life insurance shall be issued or delivered in this commonwealth until a copy of the form thereof has been filed at least thirty days with the insurance commissioner, unless before the expiration of said thirty days the said commissioner shall have approved the policy in writing; nor if the said commissioner notifies the company in writing within said thirty days that, in his opinion, the form of the policy does not comply with the laws of this commonwealth, specifying the reasons for his opinion, provided, that this action of the said commissioner shall be subject to review by the supreme judicial court; nor shall any such policy be so issued or delivered unless it contains in substance the following provisions:

4. A provision that the company will issue to the employer for delivery to the employee whose life is insured under the policy an individual certificate setting forth a statement as to the insurance protection to which he is entitled and to whom it is payable, together with a provision to the effect that in case of the termination of the employment for any reason whatsoever the employee shall be entitled to have issued to him by the company, without evidence of insurability and upon application made to the company within thirty-one days after such termination and upon the payment of the premium applicable to the class of risk to which he belongs and to the form and amount of the policy at his then attained age, a policy of life insurance in any one of the forms customarily issued by the company, except term insurance, in an amount equal to the amount of his protection under such group insurance policy at the time of such termination.

5. A provision that to the group or class thereof originally insured shall be added from time to time all new employees of the employer eligible to insurance in such group or class.

A policy shall be deemed to contain any such provision in substance when, in the opinion of the insurance commissioner, the provision is stated in terms more favorable to the employer or employee than are herein set forth. [Gen. Acts, 1918, c. 112, § 2.]

[Gen. Acts, 1918, c. 112, § 5.]

RECOMMENDATIONS CONCERNING LABOR IN THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF THE GOVERNOR, 1918.

THE WAR, AND THE SHORTAGE OF LABOR.

. . . On the tenth of last February our Committee of Public Safety was appointed, — the first committee of that kind in any State in the Union. This committee has developed a most effective organization. Under the leadership of its chairman, Mr. James J. Storrow, and its executive manager, Mr. Henry B. Endicott, it has helped greatly in the war work of the Commonwealth, and has rendered invaluable assistance in adjusting industrial disputes and securing fuel and food. The men upon this committee, however, are only representative of the great mass of citizens of the Commonwealth. Patriotism is everywhere. The desire to help the country is everywhere. The farmers have made sacrifices to augment the production of food. Large numbers of boys have volunteered to work upon the farms in order to supply the shortage of labor, and have given their services without pay. Lawyers, physicians, journalists, men of business, working men, — including the leaders of labor organizations, — judges upon the bench, earnest and patriotic women by the tens of thousands have eagerly sought avenues of service, and have helped make the Commonwealth a compact and organized unit in supporting the country.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

During the year ending June 30, 1913, which was the first year of the Workmen's Compensation Act, there was paid out to injured workers in the form of compensation and medical assistance $1,667,000. In the year ending last June there was paid out over $5,000,000 for compensation and medical treatment. This increase is great and appalling. During the last two years accidents have nearly doubled in number and severity. Reports indicate that since last June the increase has mounted to an even greater degree, — due in a measure to the supplanting of old and experienced workers by those who were inexperienced. It has been estimated that more people are now killed and injured in industry in the United States in a four-year period than were killed in battle or died of disease or wounds during the entire Civil War. This wastage of human life creates a heavy and an unpardonable drain in time of peace, but it is even more deplorable in time of war. We should increase the safeguards against accidents. There is a great social loss in addition to the individual loss which is suffered. Compensation is a very necessary and beneficent thing, but the prevention of the destruction of the lives and limbs of workers is far better than compensation, which cannot restore them again. It is estimated that the economic waste from accidents alone in the Commonwealth exceeds fifteen millions of dollars every year. I recommend that the Legislature carefully investigate this subject, with a view to providing remedial legislation.

INDUSTRIAL HEALTH INSURANCE.

There is another subject which is kindred to the one I have just referred to, and is of no less importance. In my address to the General Court a year ago I referred to the subject of health insurance for the protection and promotion of the physical well-being of the workers of the Commonwealth. The Board of Charity and Bureau of Statistics have recently undertaken the study of the causes of dependency of widows with families receiving assistance under the Mothers' Aid Law. This beneficent measure, designed to prevent the breaking of family ties, now aids over three thousand families, at an expense of approximately one million dollars each year. The investigation shows that the dependency in three cases out of four is caused by the death from sickness of the father in his prime. Where the dependency was caused by incapacity instead of death, sickness was again the preponderating cause. The men whose families were thus deprived of support had previously been employed as skilled workmen with good wages, and yet they were unable to make provision against death or serious illness. Life insurance had been sought by many of them, but the amount of the insurance had been totally inadequate — amounting in most instances to but a few hundred dollars — and was largely consumed by expenses of the last sickness and of burial. I believe these facts, and others to be found in the report to which I have referred, should receive the consideration of the General Court. They indicate that the illness of our workers is a chief cause of the dependency which costs us great sums of money each year, and that a further cause is to be found in the premature death of productive workmen. A great amount of this staggering loss and the resulting expense might be averted by prompt and adequate medical care, such as a well-organized system of health insurance would supply, and such as it does supply in those countries which have established such a system. As I have said, general legislation should at the present session be undertaken with unusual caution. But the care of the workers has a very special reference to our efficiency in war. Their labor becomes all the more necessary, for the struggle is not merely between men, but between the productive forces of the nations.

New and untrained workers, especially women, who are entering employments heretofore carried on exclusively by men, must be protected if we are to avoid the costly mistakes made by some of the nations during the earlier years of the war. The places left in our social order by the men who have entered the military service must be taken by others, who in the first instance require training and are particularly subject to accident. We should not permit our industrial life to slacken. The farms and mills and factories which are essential to our strength should be kept producing at full capacity. Good authorities declare that for every man on the battle front seven are required at home to keep him an effective fighting unit. No subject can better engage your attention at a time like this than that which relates to the conservation of the human resources of the Commonwealth and the preservation and the efficiency of her men and women. A comprehensive system which would so far as possible do away with the waste resulting from accident and sickness would be a wise, humane and beneficent measure. It would strengthen the hands of the country in war, and would result in the saving of very many millions of dollars each year to the Commonwealth. At the last session the committee of the Legislature which considered my recommendations for health and old age insurance were of the opinion that the advent of the war, after I had made my recommendations, made it advisable, as a measure of present economy, to adjourn their consideration. That view would necessitate their further adjournment until the end of the war. I believe firmly in the wisdom and justice both of health and of old age insurance, and of the inevitableness of their coming. Very much is to be said in favor of both even in war time, and especially in favor of the immediate conservation of the health of our workers.

CONTINUATION SCHOOLS.

The war must not distract our attention from the necessity of education. There has been a marked falling off in the number of scholars in our normal schools which will have a tendency to lessen the number of our trained teachers. The high wages of labor encourage young people to leave school and seek employment. The money thus obtained is often needed in the homes. In order that this condition may interfere as little as possible with the education of the boys and girls, it would seem to be wise that the attendance upon our continuation schools in such cases should be made compulsory throughout the Commonwealth, as it is now in the city of Boston.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

I also recommend the study of the question of educating men who may find it necessary, on account of injury received in the service, to renew the same or adopt some form of employment other than that which they had followed before entering the service, should the national government not make proper provision for such kind of education.

INDEX TO THE LABOR LEGISLATION OF 1915, 1916, AND 1917.

NOTE.—Paragraph numbers refer to paragraphs as appearing in the first division of this bulletin (pages 10 to 59). Each enactment which is an amendment of an earlier enactment has been given the same paragraph number which the earlier enactment had in the Handbook of Labor Laws (issued as Labor Bulletin No. 104 and containing the labor legislation in effect at the close of the legislative session of 1914.) Certain enactments which did not specifically amend any part of the text of the law, as published in the Handbook, but which bear, nevertheless, upon the subject matter contained therein, have been given the same paragraph numbers as those of the paragraphs in the Handbook to which they most nearly correspond, accompanied, however, by a capital letter A, B, etc., indicating that the later enactment is of a supplementary character.

OF

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS IN MASSACHUSETTS, 1916 AND 1917.

I.

INTRODUCTION AND GENERAL SUMMARY.

1. SCOPE AND METHOD OF THE REPORT.

The data presented in this report,¹ covering the calendar years 1916 and 1917, have reference principally to the number and membership of labor organizations in existence in the Commonwealth at the close of each of the two years, and the unemployment of organized workmen, data for previous years being presented for comparative purposes. Considerable other information was obtained from labor organizations during the two-year period, but, owing to its volume and distinctive character, it has been published in five separate bulletins, as follows: Two directories² of labor organizations in Massachusetts; two reports³ showing the union scales of wages and hours of labor in effect in the principal organized trades in Massachusetts; a report⁴ on collective agreements between employers and employees in Massachusetts in 1916; and in eight quarterly reports⁵ on the subject of employment in Massachusetts, the principal data contained therein being summarized in Section III of the present report. In addition to the bulletins containing information based primarily on union returns, the Bureau has issued a compilation of the labor laws⁶ passed during the legislative sessions of 1915, 1916, and 1917.

1908 — Part II of the Thirty-ninth Annual Report on the Statistics of Labor.

1909 — Part III of the Fortieth Annual Report on the Statistics of Labor.

1910 — Labor Bulletin No. 87.

1911 — Part II of the Forty-second Annual Report on the Statistics of Labor.

1912 — Labor Bulletin No. 96.

1913 — Labor Bulletin No. 105.

1914 — Labor Bulletin No. 112.

1915 — Labor Bulletin No. 118.

² See Labor Bulletins Nos. 113 and 119.

³ See Labor Bulletins Nos. 120 and 124.

⁴ See Labor Bulletin No. 121.

⁵ The report for the quarter ending December 31, 1917, was issued as the Fortieth Quarterly Report.

⁶ See Labor Bulletin No. 122, entitled "Labor Legislation in Massachusetts, 1915, 1916, and 1917." This Bulletin was issued as a supplement to Labor Bulletin No. 104, entitled "Handbook of Labor Laws," which contained the labor legislation in effect at the close of the legislative session in 1914.

The data presented in these several reports, in so far as they related to organized labor, were secured in answer to inquiries contained in schedules which were sent to union officials. In those instances where the union officials failed to return the schedules properly filled out, agents of this Bureau obtained the information from such officials directly, or from some other reliable source. There were only a few instances where the national officials failed to supply the information requested, and in nearly all such cases, it was possible to obtain the facts from the official journal of the organization or from some organizer or other representative residing in Massachusetts.

The returns here published were furnished as of the respective dates, December 31, 1916, and December 31, 1917, with the exception of the quarterly statistics of unemployment, which were as of the close of the respective quarters in each year. In a very few instances, owing to the failure or inability of certain organizations to state their membership as of December 31, the membership as reported at the end of the next earlier quarter of the year was taken as the approximate membership at the close of the year.

The data showing the number and membership of organizations, classified by municipalities, industries, and occupations, may be taken as an authoritative and approximately complete showing as to the aggregate membership of all the local organizations in the Commonwealth at the close of each year. With reference to the statistics of unemployment it may be stated that, while information was not received from some unions, — including those to which the inquiries were not applicable, — for all practical purposes the tabulations may be considered sufficiently complete to answer the purpose for which they have been secured, namely, that of showing the general conditions in those occupations, industries, and municipalities which are, to any considerable extent, organized. Realizing that the returns having reference only to organized labor could not properly be assumed to be fully representative of unemployment conditions affecting the entire wage-earning population, the Bureau has endeavored to cover more comprehensively the industrial field by securing a large number of reports from secretaries of boards of trade and of employers' associations, editors of trade journals, and from other persons conversant with industrial and trade conditions in this State. Abstracts and brief summaries of these trade reports were published in connection with the data furnished by the trade unions.

Details relating to individual local unions are not published by this Bureau for the reason that such information is considered confidential and that it has served its chief purpose when presented so as to show general conditions throughout the Commonwealth without disclosing facts which might be used to the detriment of any organization. In our statistical tables we have not, in any case, presented facts referring to less than four unions in any class. By express permission, however, we have published under the name of the organization to which it applies the information appearing in the Annual Directories of Labor Organizations.

2. SUMMARY OF PRINCIPAL DATA.

In the following statement the principal data appearing in this report are summarized. Except where otherwise stated the data are as of December 31 of the year specified.

² Unions which were in existence at the close of each of two successive years are designated by this Bureau as "identical unions." The net decrease of 4,578 in 1917 is the difference between the aggregate membership of the unions which were in existence at the close of 1917 and the aggregate membership of the same unions at the close of 1916; likewise the net increase of 10,053 in 1916 is the difference between the aggregate membership of the unions which were in existence at the close of 1916 and the aggregate membership of the same unions at the close of 1915.

II.

NUMBER AND MEMBERSHIP.

1. NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS.

A national or international labor organization consists of a group of affiliated local trade unions, representing a larger territory than a single State, but ordinarily having jurisdiction over but one trade or several closely allied trades. For the purpose of brevity the terms "national organizations" and "national unions" have been used in this report to designate both national and international labor organizations or unions.

The total number of national organizations having one or more chartered local unions in the United States at the close of 1917 was 147, of which number, 112 had one or more chartered local unions in Massachusetts, whereas at the close of 1916, there were 145 national organizations having one or more chartered locals in the United States, 109 of which were represented in Massachusetts by at least one affiliated local union.

A large majority of the national unions in the United States are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which bears to the national unions in the various trades and industries substantially the same relation that they, in turn, bear to their affiliated local unions. At the close of 1917 the number of national unions in the United States affiliated with the American Federation of Labor was 112, or 76.2 per cent of the total number (147) of national unions represented by one or more local unions in the United States, while at the close of 1916, the number of national unions affiliated with the Federation was 111, or 76.5 per cent of the total number (145) at that time. Of the 1,460 local unions in the State at the close of 1917, 1,231, or 84.3 per cent, were affiliated with the Federation either directly or through 87 of its affiliated national unions having chartered locals in this State, while at the close of 1916, 1,150, or 81.2 per cent of the 1,416 locals in the State, were affiliated with the Federation either directly or through 83 of its affiliated national unions. With reference to the membership of the local unions, it was found that at the close of 1917 the total membership of the 1,231 local unions directly or indirectly affiliated with the Federation was 221,493, or 79.8 per cent of the aggregate membership (277,720) of the 1,460 local unions in the State, while at the close of 1916, the total membership of the 1,150 local unions directly or indirectly affiliated with the Federation was 201,015, or 78.2 per cent of the aggregate membership (257,007) of the 1,416 local unions in the State.

The "average paid up and reported membership" of the American Federation of Labor for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1917, was 2,371,434 and for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1916, it was 2,072,702.¹ The organizations affiliated with the Federation are required to pay a per capita tax upon their full paid-up membership only, and, therefore, the membership reported does not include those members who were involved in strikes or lockouts or those who were unemployed and for whom no tax was received. Assuming, however, that the membership of the Federation as reported above is an approximately complete and accurate statement as of the close of the year, it would appear that Massachusetts, with 221,493 trade unionists directly or indirectly affiliated with the Federation at the close of 1917, furnished approximately 9.3 per cent of the entire membership of the Federation, and with 201,015 trade unionists directly or indirectly affiliated with the Federation at the close of 1916, furnished approximately 9.7 per cent of the entire membership of the Federation at that time.

On December 31, 1917, there were 14 national unions each of which was represented in Massachusetts by at least four affiliated local unions having an aggregate membership of over 5,000 members. The national unions are listed in the following table in the order of their aggregate membership at the close of 1917, and there is shown opposite the name of each organization the number of its affiliated locals in Massachusetts and the aggregate membership of these locals at the close of 1917, together with comparative data for the close of 1916.

¹ For information in further detail, see Table 1 on pp. 45 and 46.

At the close of 1917 the 14 national unions enumerated in the above table had 641 affiliated local unions in Massachusetts with an aggregate membership of 160,531 as compared with 617 locals with an aggregate membership of 149,171 at the close of 1916. Expressed in percentages, these 14 national unions included 43.9 per cent of the total number of local unions and 57.8 per cent of the aggregate membership in Massachusetts at the close of 1917, and 43.6 per cent of the total number of unions and 58.0 per cent of the aggregate membership in the State at the close of 1916.

The seven national unions, each having over ten thousand members in Massachusetts at the close of 1917 were the Boot and Shoe Workers Union, with a membership of 27,671; the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with 21,145 members; the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees, with 15,934 members; the International Association of Machinists, with 15,607 members; the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, with 11,416 members; the Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen, and Helpers, with 10,809 members, and the United Textile Workers, with 10,911 members. At the close of 1916, these seven national unions also led all others in point of membership in Massachusetts, but the Machinists, Electrical Workers, Teamsters, and Textile Workers ranked, respectively, seventh, fifth, fourth, and sixth in this respect.

The relative rank of the several national unions on the basis of number of affiliated local unions in the State does not correspond closely with their rank on the basis of membership. Thus, the Carpenters ranked first in point of number of local unions in Massachusetts, followed by (2) Boot and Shoe Workers, (3) Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers, (4) Electrical Workers, (5) Textile Workers, (6) Teamsters, and (7) Machinists. The representation by locals in Massachusetts was especially large in the case of the organizations of boot and shoe workers. Thus, at the close of 1917, 40.7 per cent of all locals in the United States affiliated with the Boot and Shoe Workers Union, and 51.1 per cent of all locals in the United States affiliated with the United Shoe Workers Union, were located in this State. In these two cases the percentages were naturally high, for the reason that a considerable portion of the boot and shoe manufacturing in the United States is done in this State.

The number of locals, as classified under each occupation elsewhere in this report, does not represent, invariably, the number of locals in Massachusetts affiliated with any international having jurisdiction over that occupation, for in some cases a local union, or group of locals in the same occupation, may have become affiliated with more than one international body, while in other cases, several closely related occupations may be under the jurisdiction of a single international.

2. DELEGATE ORGANIZATIONS.

Introductory. — Nearly all of the local organizations in Massachusetts, while affiliated with their respective international organizations, are at the same time affiliated with what this Bureau has found convenient to designate as "delegate organizations", which have no direct membership but consist merely of "delegates" or "representatives" from groups of local unions. These organizations have, for purposes of discussion, been grouped under three general classes: (A) State, District, and Trades Councils; (B) Central Labor Unions; and (C) Local Trades Councils. The number of such organizations in Massachusetts at the close of each of the ten years, 1908 to 1917, is shown in the following table.

The total number of delegate organizations in the State at the close of 1917 was 181, of which number, 79 were State, District or Trades Councils, 33 were Central Labor Unions and 69 were Local Trades Councils. During each of the nine years, 1909-1917, except 1913 and 1915, there was an increase in the number of these organizations, as compared with the number in existence at the close of the preceding year, but usually the increase was comparatively small, and during the year 1917 there was a net increase of only two in the number of such organizations.

A. STATE, DISTRICT, AND TRADES COUNCILS.

The total number of organizations included in this group at the close of 1917 was 79, as compared with a total of 75 at the close of 1916. These 79 organizations included 13 State Branches, comprising locals affiliated with various internationals; six New England District Councils having affiliated locals in Massachusetts; 28 Railway Adjustment Committees, Grievance Committees, and Conference Boards; and 32 District Trades Councils (including carpenters, 11; painters, 7; machinists, 4; and others, 10). During the year 1917 there was a net increase of two in the number of Painters District Councils and of Machinists District Councils, an increase of one in the miscellaneous group, and a decrease of one in the number of Railway Adjustment Committees.

The organizations of this character having at least 25 affiliated local unions in Massachusetts at the close of 1917 were: The Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, with 33 central labor unions and 427 local unions affiliated; the Massachusetts State Council, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with 20 local district councils and 144 local unions; the Grand Council of Carpenters of Eastern Massachusetts, with 10 local district councils and 77 local unions; the New England Organizing Conference of Boot and Shoe Workers, with 64 locals in this State; the Massachusetts State Conference of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers, with 63 locals; the Massachusetts State Conference of Bricklayers, Masons, and Plasterers, with 44 locals; the New England Branch, Hotel and Restaurant Employees Alliance and Bartenders International League, with 40 locals in this State; the Massachusetts State Association of the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters, and Steam Fitters Helpers, with 39 locals; the Joint Council of Electrical Workers of New England, with 37 locals in this State; and the Massachusetts State Council of Journeymen Barbers, with 25 local unions affiliated.

B. CENTRAL LABOR UNIONS.

The number of central labor unions in Massachusetts at the close of 1917 was 33, as compared with 36 in 1916. There was one such body in each of 25 cities and eight towns. During the year the central labor unions in Athol, Medford, and Quincy were disbanded.

The aggregate number of local unions (including a few duplications) affiliated with the 33 central labor unions in Massachusetts was 884. There were 15 central labor unions, each of which had 20 or more affiliated locals, as follows: Boston, 179; Springfield, 58; Lowell, 55; Worcester, 51; Brockton, 46; Holyoke, 44; Taunton, 38; New Bedford, 36; Lawrence, 33; Haverhill, 29; Pittsfield, 28; Fall River, 26; Cambridge, 25; Fitchburg, 23; and Lynn, 22, making a total of 693 locals affiliated with these 15 central labor unions. The number of locals affiliated with the remaining 18 central labor unions was 191.

C. LOCAL TRADES COUNCILS.

Within this group there were 69 organizations at the close of 1917, comprising 10 carpenters district councils, 17 building trades councils, eight joint shoe councils, seven allied printing trades councils, four textile councils, three metal trades councils, and 20 other local trade councils. Of these 69 organizations, 23 were in Boston, five in Brockton, four each in Haverhill, Lowell, Lynn, and Worcester, three each in Lawrence, New Bedford, Springfield, and Quincy, two each in Fall River and Pittsfield, and one each in Fitchburg, Greenfield, Holyoke, Maynard, Newton, North Adams, Taunton, Westfield, and Whitman. In each of these 21 localities, except Greenfield, Maynard, Newton, Quincy, and Whitman, there was also a central labor union. In 17 localities other than the 16 of those named above, there was a central labor union but no local trades council.

3. LOCAL TRADE UNIONS.

Introductory. — In this section of the report data are presented¹ showing the number of local labor organizations in Massachusetts at the close of each of the ten years, 1908–1917; also, for the close of 1916 and 1917, the number and membership of locals in the leading cities and towns, the number and membership of local unions classified by industries and by occupations, the number of women in these organizations classified by municipalities and occupations, the membership of the largest local unions (in 1917), and the membership of identical unions in 1916 and 1917.

A. COMPARISONS BY YEARS, 1908–1917.

In the following table is shown the total number of local unions in Massachusetts at the close of each of the ten years, 1908–1917, together with additional data showing by sex the aggregate membership reported at the close of each year.

¹ Detailed tables will be found on pp. 47 to 52 and are numbered, respectively, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7.

² In the report for 1908, the number of local unions for that year was given as 1,256. This total included 13 unions which are not included in the totals for the other seven years in the table, and which were not, strictly speaking, labor organizations, but rather educational and beneficial organizations. The totals for 1908 have, accordingly, been corrected as above in order that the totals for the several years may be strictly comparable.

During the nine-year period, 1908-1917, with the exception of two years (1914 and 1916) there was an increase from year to year in the number of local unions, and, with the exception of only one year (1914) an increase in the aggregate trade union membership. In 1912 there was an increase of 79 in the number of unions and an increase of 45,730 in the membership, these exceptionally large increases having been due in considerable measure to special organizing work in the textile industry and in the transportation industry during that year. The increase in the number of local unions during the entire period, 1908-1917, was 217, or 17.4 per cent, while the increase in the number of members was 104,321, or 60.2 per cent. That the increase in membership was not due merely to the formation of new unions is indicated by the fact that the average membership of the unions in existence at the close of 1908 was 139, whereas the average membership of those in existence at the close of 1917 was 190.

The number of local unions in the State at the close of 1917 was 1,460, as compared with 1,416 at the close of 1916, showing a net increase of 44 locals, 143 new unions having been organized and 99 having disbanded during the year.

The aggregate trade union membership at the close of 1917 was 277,720, as compared with 257,007 at the close of 1916, showing a net increase during the year, 1917, of 20,713, or 8.1 per cent. With reference to this increase it may be stated that the membership of the 143 new unions organized in 1917 was 34,890, while the membership at the close of 1916 of the 99 unions which disbanded in 1917 was 9,599, and there was a decrease of 4,578 in the membership of 1,317 "identical" unions, which were in existence both at the close of 1916 and 1917.

B. DISTRIBUTION OF LOCAL UNIONS BY MUNICIPALITIES.¹

A classification of local organizations by cities and towns is a rather essential one because their principal field of activity is the local community, whether that be a city, a town, or a section of a city or town. In many instances, however, a so-called "local organization" may have jurisdiction over one or more adjoining cities or towns, or, in the case of railroad organizations, over even an entire railroad system. In those instances where the jurisdiction of an organization covers more than one city or town the Bureau has classified such organization under that city or town in which it maintains its headquarters, the membership of such local union usually being largely confined to the locality in which its headquarters are located. The total membership of organizations classified under Boston, for example, is probably in excess of the actual number of organized workingmen who reside in Boston because, for convenience, certain residents of neighboring localities may be members of an organization having its headquarters in Boston. In the case of certain so-called local railroad organizations the membership may include employees from even distant points on the particular railroad system represented; nevertheless, the actual headquarters is the essential consideration, and it is partly for this reason that no attempt has been made to determine the actual residence of the members of such unions. Accurate showing on the latter basis would obviously be very difficult, rendering it necessary for the Bureau to ascertain the actual place of residence of each member of each local organization in the State, or at least to secure a statement in detail from each organization as to the residence of its members, an elaborate inquiry which would hardly be justified by the value of the information when obtained.

Boston quite naturally out-ranked the other municipalities of the State with respect to the number of unions and their aggregate membership. Of the 1,460 local unions in existence in Massachusetts at the close of 1917, 308, or 21.1 per cent, had their headquarters in Boston, as compared with 293, or 20.7 per cent, of the 1,416 unions in Massachusetts at the close of 1916. Of the aggregate membership (277,720) of all unions in the State at the close of 1917, 105,779, or 38.1 per cent, were in unions having their headquarters in Boston, as compared with 100,522, or 39.1 per cent of the aggregate membership (257,007) at the close of 1916.

The cities in which there were 25 or more local unions at the close of 1917 were: Boston, 308; Springfield, 83; Lowell, 69; Worcester, 68; Lynn, 54; Brockton, 51; Holyoke, 46; New Bedford, 46; Lawrence, 45; Fall River, 39; Haverhill, 36; Taunton, 34; Fitchburg, 33; Pittsfield, 33; Salem, 33; North Adams, 26; and Northampton, 24. Those having more than 2,500 trade unionists were: Boston, 105,779; Springfield, 16,106; Brockton, 15,763; Lowell, 14,541; Lynn, 13,778; New Bedford, 12,398; Worcester, 9,825; Fall River, 8,896; Haverhill, 8,746; Lawrence, 4,928; Holyoke, 4,722; Salem, 4,335; Gloucester, 4,260; Attleboro, 3,408; Pittsfield, 3,301; Taunton, 2,899; and Quincy, 2,776.

At the close of 1917 there were 123 municipalities in the State each of which was represented by at least one local trade union. There was at least one local union in each of the 38 cities and in 85 of the 319 towns, leaving 234 towns not so represented. All of the municipalities represented at the close of 1916 were also represented at the close of 1917, with the exception of Marion, Saugus, and Westford, while on the other hand three towns (Abington, Peabody, and Provincetown) which were not represented at the close of 1916, had one local each at the close of 1917. In 78 of the 123 municipalities represented at the close of 1917 the number of local unions remained the same as at the close of 1916, in 29 there was an increase of at least one union, and in 16 there was a decrease of at least one union. There was a net increase of three or more unions in each of the following municipalities: Boston, 15; Lawrence, Newburyport, and Springfield, five each; New Bedford, four; and Beverly and Southbridge, three each. In Leominster and Lowell there was a decrease of three unions each, but in no other municipality was there a decrease of more than two unions.

In each of 56 of the 126¹ municipalities which were represented by one or more local unions in 1916 or 1917, there was a net increase in the number of trade unionists, aggregating 27,876; in each of 67 municipalities there was a net decrease, aggregating 7,163; while in three municipalities the number of trade unionists remained the same. The net increase in union membership in the State was, therefore, 20,713. The municipalities showing increases of more than 500 trade unionists were: Boston, 5,257; Lowell, 3,963; Attleboro, 3,370; New Bedford, 2,839; Gloucester, 2,641; Springfield, 2,496; Lawrence, 915; Abington, 900; Maynard, 663; Lynn, 647; and Salem, 529. In each of three municipalities there was a decrease of more than 500 trade unionists, namely, Pittsfield, 867; Fall River, 533; and Brockton, 513.

Of the 143 new unions formed during 1917, 39 were in Boston, nine in Springfield, six each in Holyoke, Lawrence, and New Bedford, and five each in Lowell and Newburyport. The remaining 67 unions were distributed among 35 municipalities. It therefore appears that the work of organization of new unions during the year was by no means confined to the largest industrial centers. Of the 99 unions which were disbanded, 24 were in Boston, and 8 were in Lowell, while the remaining 67 were distributed among 39 municipalities.

C. COMPARISONS BY INDUSTRIES AND OCCUPATIONS.

(a) *Industries.*²

Inasmuch as local unions are not always organized strictly on an industrial basis, it is somewhat difficult to so classify them, consequently when one union represents, through its membership, more than one industry, it has been classified with that industry in which the greatest number of its members are employed.

The 1,460 unions in Massachusetts at the close of 1917 have been classified as follows: Building trades, 374; transportation (steam and electric), 164; boot and shoe manufacturing, 112; iron and steel manufacturing, 98; textiles, 68; printing and allied trades, 54; and all other industries, 590. In numerical strength boot and shoe manufacturing ranked first, with a membership of 44,403, followed by building trades with 41,990 members; transportation (steam and electric), 36,278; iron and steel manufacturing, 21,058; textile manufacturing, 20,617; printing and allied trades, 6,655; and all other industries, 106,719.

On page 20 appears a chart showing, graphically, the number and membership of local labor organizations in Massachusetts at the close of each year, 1908 to 1917, and in the table on page 19 appear the statistics on which the graphs are based.

In the following paragraphs the principal industries are separately discussed.

Boot and Shoe Manufacturing. The increase in the number of local unions in this industry during the nine-year period, 1908-1917, was 30, or 36.6 per cent, while the increase in the number of members was 14,399, or 48.0 per cent. In 1909 there was an increase of 8,238 members, and in 1912 an increase of 4,017 members, but during the other years of the period no marked changes in the aggregate number of organized boot and shoe workers occurred.

Building Trades. During the period of nine years, 1908-1917, the number of local unions increased from 333 to 374 (only 12.3 per cent), but there was an increase in membership of 52.5 per cent. The largest annual increases in membership occurred in 1913 and 1916, when the increases were 3,213 and 3,924, respectively. These increases, however, were not due primarily to the organizing of new unions, but rather to increases in membership of existing unions.

Transportation (Steam and Electric). The increase in the number of unions during the nine-year period was 42, or 34.4 per cent, while the increase in membership was 18,307, or 102.8 per cent. In 1912 there was an increase of 9,950 members, and in 1913 an increase of 3,122 members, these increases being largely the result of special efforts which were made in those years to organize the street railway employees in Massachusetts. Since 1913 there has been no marked increase in membership.

Textile Industry. In 1912, as the result of an organizing campaign conducted in the leading textile centers in Massachusetts by representatives of the Industrial Workers of the World, the number of organized textile workers was increased from 15,863 at the close of 1911 to 31,962 at the close of 1912, or over 100 per cent, but since 1912, owing to the disbanding of, or loss of membership by, local unions of Industrial Workers, the number of organized textile workers rapidly declined until, at the close of 1915, it was only 17,287. A further analysis of the returns shows, however, that during the period, 1908-1917, there was a fairly constant increase in the aggregate membership of the unions of textile workers not affiliated with the Industrial Workers of the World. The net increase in number of unions during the period was 33.3 per cent and the net increase in membership was 33.2 per cent.

Iron and Steel Manufacturing. At the close of 1917 there were in this group of trades 98 unions, with an aggregate membership of 21,058, as compared with 106 unions having an aggregate membership of 9,021 at the close of 1908, showing a decrease of eight in the number of unions, but an increase of 12,037, or 133.4 per cent, in union membership during the period of nine years. In 1909, 1911, 1913 and 1914 the union membership was less than that in 1908. In 1915 there was an increase of 9,207 members — the result of an organizing campaign among machinists and metal polishers, coincident with more than ordinary activity in those trades, due primarily to the receipt of orders from Europe for large quantities of munitions. The membership fell off somewhat in 1916, but in 1917 there was an increase of 5,274 union members in this industry.

Printing and Allied Trades. With the single exception of 1915, there was, from year to year, an increase in the membership of unions in this group of trades. At the close of 1917 there were 54 unions having an aggregate membership of 6,655, as compared with 42 unions having an aggregate membership of 4,658 at the close of 1908, showing an increase of 28.6 per cent in the number of unions, and of 42.9 per cent in the membership during the nine-year period.

(b) Occupations.¹

Local unions are, for the most part, organized on the basis of a specific craft or trade, but it occasionally happens that one is formed of workers in correlated occupations, or in different branches of the same occupation. Thus, in certain localities, where there is not a sufficient number of persons in a single craft to form a distinct local for each craft, the American Federation of Labor has made it a practice to form what are known as "federal labor unions," in which are associated those wage-earners whose occupation is such that they are not eligible to join any of the existing locals in those localities. Another example of unions of this character is the "mixed union" of boot and shoe workers, which may include lasters, stitchers, and others employed in the various branches of boot and shoe manufacturing. Such unions have been classified in this report under that occupation in which a majority of their members is employed.

The occupations in which there were 25 or more unions at the close of 1917 were as follows: Carpenters, 145; boot and shoe workers, 112; textile workers, 68; painters, decorators, and paperhangers, 63; electrical workers, 58;¹ bricklayers, masons, and plasterers, 48; machinists, 48; municipal employees, 48; plumbers, steamfitters and gasfitters, 47; teamsters, chauffeurs, and stablemen, 46; barbers, 34; theatrical stage employees, 30; molders and coremakers, 28; musicians, 27; and street and electric railway employees, 26. The only occupations in which there was a net change of five or more local unions were boot and shoe workers, with an increase of nine unions, and electrical workers, with an increase of seven unions.

The occupations comprising at least 2,500 organized wage-earners at the close of 1917 were: Boot and shoe workers, 44,403; carpenters, 21,220; textile workers, 20,617; machinists, 16,119; street and electrical railway employees, 15,934; electrical workers, 11,416 (including 5,370 telephone operators); teamsters, chauffeurs, and stablemen, 11,059; garment workers, 8,977; municipal employees, 6,691; painters, decorators, and paperhangers, 6,593; musicians, 5,466; bricklayers, masons, and plasterers, 4,920; railroad trainmen, 4,744; hod carriers and building laborers, 4,550; cooks and waiters, 4,257; molders and coremakers, 4,111; bartenders, 3,804; plumbers, steamfitters and gasfitters, 3,582; cigar-makers, 3,230; compositors, 3,150; retail clerks, 2,623; and barbers, 2,525. Boot and shoe workers constituted 16.0 per cent of the aggregate membership of all the local trade unions in the State, followed by carpenters with 7.6 per cent, textile workers with 7.4 per cent, machinists with 5.8 per cent, and street and electrical railway employees with 5.7 per cent. The occupations in which there were increases of more than 1,000 organized wage-earners in 1917 were as follows: Machinists, 5,392; textile workers, 2,559; cooks and waiters, 1,482; boot and shoe workers, 1,236; and telephone operators, 1,022. In no occupation was there a decrease of more than 1,000 members.

D. WOMEN IN LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

The organized women wage-earners of Massachusetts are well represented in several occupations, and at the close of 1917 comprised 14.0 per cent of the total number of trade unionists. Tabulations¹ by sex of the membership of labor organizations in the State show that there were 245 unions having women as members, as compared with 218 unions at the close of 1916. The aggregate female membership at the close of 1917 was 38,874, as compared with 31,312 in 1916, showing a gain of 7,562 members, or 24.2 per cent. The occupations in which there were increases of more than 1,000 female members were: Garment workers, 1,720; textile workers, 1,382; boot and shoe workers, 1,137; and telephone operators, 1,022.

In each of the following municipalities there were five or more local unions having women as members: Boston, 58; Brockton, 16; Lynn, 13; Springfield, 12; Lowell, 11; New Bedford, 10; Haverhill, 9; Worcester, 8; Fall River and Holyoke, 7 each; Lawrence and Salem, 6 each; and Fitchburg and North Adams, 5 each.

The municipalities in which there were more than 500 female trade unionists at the close of 1917 were: Boston, 11,201; Lynn, 4,174; Brockton, 3,966; Lowell, 3,964; New Bedford, 3,611; Fall River, 2,225; Haverhill, 1,188; Springfield, 833; Salem, 779; Worcester, 693; and Maynard, 647. The total number of organized female wage-earners in these 11 municipalities was 33,281, or 85.6 per cent of the total female trade union membership in the State. In Lowell there was a net increase of 3,461 in the number of women in trade unions in 1917, which increase consisted largely of machine specialists (munitions workers). In Boston there was a net increase of 1,415 female trade unionists, consisting principally of garment workers and telephone operators; in New Bedford, a net increase of 1,297, principally textile operatives; and in Lynn, a net increase of 1,190, principally boot and shoe workers. In Attleboro and North Attleborough large numbers of jewelry workers (women) were organized during the year.

Of the 38,874 female trade unionists in Massachusetts at the close of 1917, 13,501, or 34.7 per cent, were boot and shoe workers; 6,998, or 18.0 per cent, were textile operatives; 5,369, or 13.8 per cent, were telephone operators; 4,317, or 11.1 per cent, were garment workers; 3,053, or 7.9 per cent, were machine specialists (munitions workers); and 5,636, or 14.5 per cent, were distributed as follows: Cooks and waitresses, 741; tobacco strippers, 525; musicians, 509; electrical workers, 496; jewelry workers, 480; retail clerks, 345; laundry workers, 325; composers, 309; cigarmakers, 303; hat and cap makers, 252; street and electric railway clerks, 211; bookbinders, 177; steam railway clerks, 157; paper makers, 136; fish workers, 100; and other occupations, 570.¹

Of the 245 unions which had female members at the close of 1917, 31, with an aggregate membership of 10,388, were composed entirely of women. Ten of these were in Boston, four in Springfield, two in Lowell, and there was one in each of 15 other cities.

There were 72 unions, each of which had 100 or more female members, and of this number two had 3,000 or more female members, two had over 2,000 but less than 3,000, three had over 1,000 but less than 2,000, twelve had over 500 but less than 1,000, and 53 had more than 100 but less than 500 female members. The aggregate number of women in these 72 unions was 34,671, or 89.2 per cent of the total number of female trade unionists in the State. These unions were distributed as follows: Boston, 21; Brockton, 7; New Bedford, 6; Lynn, 5; Lowell, 4; Salem, 3; Fall River, Haverhill, Maynard, Springfield, and Worcester, 2 each; and 16 other municipalities, 1 each.

E. MEMBERSHIP OF THE LARGEST LOCAL UNIONS.

Of the 1,460 local unions in existence in Massachusetts at the close of 1917, 51 reported each a membership of 1,000 or over. The membership of the largest union was 7,600, and of the next largest, 3,426, while there were five other unions with a membership of 3,000 or more, 11 with a membership of more than 2,000 but less than 3,000, and 33, with a membership of 1,000 or more but less than 1,500. Of these 51 unions, 23 were located in Boston, five each in Brockton and New Bedford, three in Fall River, two each in Haverhill, Lowell, Lynn, and Springfield, and one each in Attleboro, Bridgewater, Gloucester, Middleborough, North Attleborough, Rockland, and Worcester. By occupations, these unions were distributed as follows: Boot and shoe workers, 13; textile workers, 8; machinists, 5; garment workers, street and electric railway employees, teamsters, jewelry workers and fishermen, 2 each; and there was one union in each of 15 other occupations. Seven of these unions had more than 1,000 female members each, two of which (machine specialists and telephone operators) consisted wholly of women.

¹ Includes municipal employees, fur workers, men's neckwear workers, hat trimmers, cigar box finishers, railway telegraphers, day house-workers, railway carmen, corset workers, tailoresses and dressmakers, can makers, upholsterers, stenographers, office cleaners, rubber workers, bakers, station agents and employees, rag pickers, and one printing presswoman and one news writer.

F. MEMBERSHIP OF IDENTICAL UNIONS, 1916 AND 1917.

During the course of a single year a considerable number of local unions disband and many new ones are formed; consequently, while the total number of unions existing at the close of one year may vary but little from the total number existing at the close of the previous year, tabulations based on these totals may by no means represent identical unions. In order to ascertain the actual fluctuation in membership of identical unions (i.e., of unions in existence both at the close of 1916 and 1917) a table¹ has been prepared showing, for specified cities and for other cities and towns grouped together, the membership of identical unions in 1916 and 1917, and also the increase or decrease in 1917, as compared with 1916. The total number of identical unions was 1,317 and a net decrease in membership of 4,578 was reported by these organizations.

In each of the following municipalities there was an increase of over 500 in the membership of unions in existence both at the close of 1916 and of 1917: Lowell, 1,963; Maynard, 676; Springfield, 622; and Lynn, 523; while in each of the following municipalities there was a decrease of 500 or more members: Boston, 2,381; Pittsfield, 906; Brockton, 711; and Haverhill, 504.

Of the 1,317 identical unions, six reported an increase and five reported a decrease of 500 or more members, each. The largest gain in membership was that of 1,086 members reported by one organization of boot and shoe workers, and the largest loss of membership reported by any organization was 856.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN THE ORGANIZED INDUSTRIES, 1908-1917.

Introductory. — In 1908 this Bureau inaugurated the plan of collecting from organized wage-earners in Massachusetts quarterly statistics showing the percentages of membership of trade unions in the State who were unemployed, and this plan has since been consistently followed, so that a series of comparable statistics based on reports from labor organizations for the ten years, 1908-1917, are now available. In this report is presented a summary of the information thus obtained in the form of a series of statistical tables,¹ together with two charts, the one representing facts obtained for Massachusetts with corresponding information for the United Kingdom, Germany, and New York State, and the other showing for the principal industries of the State the fluctuations in unemployment in Massachusetts.

In order that the significance of the data presented herein may be clearly understood, it should be pointed out that the percentages are based upon reports received from officials of labor organizations, and have reference only to organized labor. The number of reports received at the close of December, 1917, was 1,093, representing an aggregate membership of 201,404, or about 70 per cent of the total number of organized wage-earners in the Commonwealth. When this Bureau first began to collect these returns in 1908, only about 40 per cent of the total number of trade unionists in the State were represented, but by the close of 1912 the percentage represented had been increased to about 70 per cent, and since 1912 it has remained fairly constant, i.e., about 70 per cent at the close of each quarter.

While the returns are believed to be representative of employment conditions among organized wage-earners in the State, no claim is made by the Bureau that they are fully representative of employment conditions among the entire wage-earning population, organized and unorganized. Some authorities hold that, particularly in times of depression, there is a greater amount of unemployment among the unorganized than among the organized wage-earners, while others, on the contrary, hold that the organized employees, because of their unwillingness to work for less than the standard scale of wages are the first to lose their positions when an industrial depression renders it necessary for employers to reduce their labor costs. Whatever the relative merits of these two points of view, it seems reasonable to assume that, notwithstanding the fact that the absolute percentages of unemployment which are derived from trade union returns may not be fully representative of general conditions for the entire wage-earning population, nevertheless, the fluctuations in the trade union percentages show, at least, the trend of the labor market even though the data may not serve as an accurate measure of the amount of unemployment prevailing at any one time.

Quarterly reports¹ on employment in Massachusetts have been published each year during the period, 1908-1917. Each of these reports contains the returns, in detail, for the quarter just ended previous to its publication, together with comparable returns for earlier quarters and several pages of descriptive text. Beginning with the report for the close of the first quarter in 1915, considerable information based on reports from secretaries of boards of trade and of employers' associations, editors of trade journals, and from other persons conversant with industrial and trade conditions in the State, has been added with a view to covering, more comprehensively, the entire industrial field.

Annual summaries of the statistics relative to unemployment among the organized wage-earners of Massachusetts have been published by this Bureau in its "Annual Reports on Labor Organizations."² The present summary covers the returns for a complete decade, ending with the report for the close of December, 1917.

¹ As the last day of this quarter fell on Sunday, the previous day was taken as the date for which information was requested.

² The percentage (14.1) was unusually high because the number reported as unemployed included over 9,000 organized textile workers in Lowell who were involved in a strike pending on March 30, 1912.

On reference to the percentages unemployed for all causes, shown in the preceding table, it will be observed that the highest percentage recorded during the entire ten-year period, 1908-1917, was 18.3 for the close of December in 1914, when was experienced the severest stress of the period of industrial depression which began shortly after the outbreak of the European war, and which continued until the early summer of 1915. During the industrial depression, which began in the Fall of 1907 and continued until the Spring of 1909, abnormally high percentages unemployed were also recorded, the percentage for March, 1908, having been 17.9, or only slightly lower than the maximum, 18.3, for the ten-year period. The high percentage (14.1) at the close of March, 1912, was due principally to the unemployment of large numbers of textile workers who were either on strike or who had not yet returned to work, following strikes in Lawrence, Lowell, and other textile centers.

The effect of seasonal inactivity, principally in the building trades, is usually indicated by higher percentages for the close of March and of December in each year than for the close of June and of September in the same year.

The lowest percentage unemployed for all causes recorded during the ten-year period was 3.9 at the close of September, 1916. In only three other instances have the percentages unemployed for all causes been less than 5.0 per cent, namely, June 30, 1916 (4.2), September 30, 1912 (4.7), and September 30, 1909 (4.8). In each of the ten years except 1913 and 1914 the percentage for the close of September was lower than the corresponding percentages for the close of the other quarters of the same year.

During the period, 1908-1917, there have been marked fluctuations in the percentages unemployed at the close of the several quarters, and the fluctuations within a single year have been large in several instances, but, on the basis of the mean percentages for the several years, the years 1916 and 1917 appear to have been the most prosperous years, while the years 1908, 1914, and 1915, in the order mentioned, appear to have been the least prosperous years of the period.

The mean percentage for the entire ten-year period was 9.0, but in view of the fact that two industrial depressions occurred during this period, and that since the outbreak of the war in 1914 industrial conditions have been influenced by other than purely economic factors, this mean percentage can hardly be regarded as a normal standard for determining the degree of prosperity or depression which may prevail at any given time. In all probability the normal percentage unemployed for all causes would be lower rather than higher than the mean (9.0) for the entire period, and it may be suggested that the mean percentage (8.1) for the four-year period, 1910-1913, inclusive, would be more nearly normal, because during that period no industrial depression occurred and war conditions did not prevail.

A. CAUSES OF UNEMPLOYMENT.

The percentages unemployed at the close of each quarter during the ten-year period, 1908-1917, classified by causes of unemployment, are presented in the following table:

¹ Including vacations, temporary shut-downs for repairs, stock-taking, etc.

² Less than 0.05 per cent.

³ As the last day of this quarter fell on Sunday, the previous day was taken as the date for which information was requested.

⁴ This percentage was unusually high because the number reported as unemployed included over 9,000 organized textile workers in Lowell who were involved in a strike pending on March 30, 1912.

Lack of Work. The principal cause of unemployment at the close of each quarter during the ten-year period under review was lack of work. In deriving the percentages unemployed for this cause those members who were unemployed because of unfavorable weather, strikes and lockouts and disability have been excluded, consequently these percentages indicate even more truly the demand for labor than the percentages unemployed for all causes, already discussed, although the same general conclusions result from a study of the two groups of percentages.

At the close of each quarter in 1916 and 1917, the percentages unemployed on account of lack of work were uniformly low, indicating that, following the period of depression which began in this country shortly after the outbreak of the war in August, 1914, and which continued for more than a year, there was a resumption of industrial activity, due in large measure, no doubt, to European demands for war supplies and other products. The lowest percentages recorded during the ten-year period, 1908-1917, were 1.3 on June 30, 1916; 1.9 on September 30, 1916; 2.7 on December 30, 1916; and 2.7 on September 29, 1917. In no other years during this period did the percentage fall below 3.0 (the percentage recorded at the close of September, 1912).

The effect of industrial depression in 1908 and again in 1914 and 1915 is indicated by high percentages unemployed on account of lack of work, namely, 16.2, on March 31, 1908; 12.5, on June 30, 1908; 11.0, on December 31, 1908; 14.9, on December 31, 1914; and 12.8, on March 31, 1915.

Weather. The percentages unemployed on account of weather usually are relatively high at the end of the last quarter, and occasionally at the close of the first quarter of each year. The highest percentage unemployed for this cause during the ten-year period was 2.4 at the close of December, 1909, while at the close of several quarters, more particularly those ending on June 30 and September 30, the percentages were practically negligible.

Strikes and Lockouts. Except for the high percentage (6.3) unemployed on account of strikes or lockouts at the close of March, 1912 (due principally to a succession of strikes of textile workers, of which those in Lawrence and Lowell are most memorable), there were no considerable fluctuations in these percentages during the period under consideration. In no other instance did the percentage unemployed for this cause exceed 2.8, — the percentage for the close of June, 1917, when a large number of boot and shoe factories in Lynn were closed, pending the negotiation of a new working agreement.

The percentages unemployed on account of disability (sickness, accident, and old age) were fairly constant from quarter to quarter. The highest percentage reported as unemployed because of disability, on record during the period, was 1.9, and the lowest was 0.7. The more usual percentage was 1.2, and the mean percentage for the entire period was 1.3.

B. UNEMPLOYMENT IN MUNICIPALITIES.

On examination of the percentages unemployed in the leading cities¹ in the State, it appears that in Boston, which city ordinarily includes fully one-third of the total membership reporting each quarter, and in which there is a fairly general representation of all organized industries and occupations in the State, the percentages unemployed correspond rather closely with the percentages unemployed for the State as a whole. The usual increase in unemployment during the winter months, which is reflected in the percentages for the State as a whole, is true also of the percentages for the city of Boston. With few exceptions, however, the other leading cities in the State show no uniform correspondence of this nature; in fact, in those cities which are industrially more specialized, practically no uniformity whatever will be observed, and the percentages unemployed in any such specialized city rise and fall usually with the rise and fall of the percentages of unemployment in the major industry of that city.

C. UNEMPLOYMENT IN THE VARIOUS INDUSTRIES.

The percentages unemployed in the several industries do not correspond closely with the percentages for all industries, except in the case of the building trades, which include each quarter a fairly large proportion of the aggregate membership represented by the returns; and in all of the principal industries there may be noted a wide range of unemployment.

In the following table are shown, for the period under consideration, the percentages unemployed in the six leading industries at the close of the respective quarters.

¹ See Table 9, on p. 54. In this report unemployment data for the principal cities are presented for the years 1916 and 1917, only. Corresponding data for the years 1908 to 1915, inclusive, were published in Labor Bulletin No. 118 (see table 9 on pp. 58 and 59 of that Bulletin).

¹ As the last day of this quarter fell on Sunday, the previous day was taken as the date for which information was requested.

² This percentage was unusually high because the number reported as unemployed included over 9,000 organized textile workers in Lowell who were involved in a strike pending on March 30, 1912.

³ This high percentage was due principally to the unemployment of a very large number of machinists in Worcester who were on strike.

Building Trades. In this group of trades a percentage exceeding 20.0 per cent was recorded at the close of March in each of the years 1908, 1914, 1915, and 1916, and at the close of December in each of the years 1908, 1911, 1913, and 1914. It will be observed that in the building trades higher percentages are usually reported as unemployed at the close of March and December in each year than at the close of June or September in the same year, and the differences in percentages illustrate the extent to which building operations are suspended during the winter season. The highest percentage reported as unemployed in this group of trades at the close of any quarter during the ten-year period, 1908-1917, was 33.8 on December 31, 1914, when severe weather conditions, occurring during a general industrial depression, resulted in the unemployment of very large numbers of building tradesmen. During periods of depression, such as those which occurred in 1908 and 1914, high percentages unemployed in the building trades were also recorded at the close of June and September.

Boot and Shoe Manufacturing. Usually in this industry there is a slack period in the Spring, commonly termed by the trade as "between seasons", and it will be observed that the percentage reported as unemployed at the close of March each year was, with only one exception (1914) higher than the corresponding percentage for the close of December in the same year. In 1908 and 1914 the percentages at the close of June and September were decidedly high for this industry and indicated the effect of the general industrial depression during those two years. The high percentages reported as unemployed at the close of June and September in 1917 were due to the closing down in April of that year of 18 or more factories in Lynn as a result of an industrial controversy. Although an agreement between the employers and employees was reached on September 20, the factories were not in full operation in all departments at the close of September.

Textile Industry. In this industry the effects of the industrial depression during the winter of 1907-1908 were very keenly felt, the percentage at the close of March, 1908, having been 43.9, and although there was some recovery during the second and third quarters of the year 1908, the high percentage, 20.9, at the close of December, 1908, indicated that the recovery was by no means complete even at that time. The very high percentage (29.1) on March 30, 1912, was due to the unemployment of a large number of textile workers who were involved in strikes on that date. Other high percentages were reported as follows: 21.3, on June 30, 1911; 21.2, on December 31, 1914; and 17.9, on June 30, 1910. At the close of each quarter during the three-year period, 1915-1917, the percentages were uniformly low, indicating that, as a result of European demands for textile products, the textile operatives in this State were quite fully employed.

In this connection it should be pointed out that owing to the comparatively small percentage organized of the aggregate number of textile workers in Massachusetts, the returns for this industry are, admittedly, very meagre. Organizations which report, however, are composed principally of the more skilled workmen in this industry, on the progress of whose work depend those processes on which unskilled labor is principally employed. The facts, therefore, may be taken as representative of general conditions in the industry from time to time, but no claim is made that they constitute a fully reliable index of the amount of unemployment throughout the entire industry at any one time.

Transportation (Steam and Electric). The highest percentages unemployed in this industry were 13.3, on March 31, 1908; 8.9, on June 30, 1908; and 8.8, on March 31, 1915. Ordinarily railroad employees are rather continuously employed, and the percentages unemployed, therefore, are usually low and fairly constant. Furthermore, it is a practice of the railway companies to place their employees on "short time" rather than to reduce the force whenever conditions are such as to necessitate a curtailing of expenses during periods of depression. For this reason the comparative percentages do not indicate the full measure of unemployment in this industry during such periods.

Iron and Steel Manufacturing. The percentages reported as unemployed at the close of each quarter in 1908, 1912, 1914, and 1915, with the exception of the first quarter in 1912, exceeded 10.0 per cent, which percentage may be considered as decidedly above normal for this industry. It is also of interest to note that at the close of December in each of the eight years, 1908-1915, the percentages exceeded 10.0 per cent. In 1916 and 1917, however, the great demand for munitions and other metal products for use in Europe resulted in reducing the percentages unemployed to a very low figure, and, except for a certain amount of unemployment due to strikes, the effects of which are reflected in high percentages unemployed, the same satisfactory conditions existed at the close of September and December in 1915 as in 1916 and 1917.

Printing and Allied Trades. High percentages were reported as unemployed in this group of trades during the periods of general industrial depression in 1908 and in 1914 and 1915, but in other years the percentages seldom exceeded 6.0 per cent, and were fairly constant, averaging about 5.0 per cent. Although there was actually less activity in these trades in 1916 and 1917 as a result of war conditions and a shortage in the supply of paper, only comparatively small numbers of printing tradesmen were reported as unemployed at the close of any quarter during these two years, except the first quarter in 1916, the reason being that any surplus labor was readily absorbed by other industries.

D. UNEMPLOYMENT IN THE VARIOUS OCCUPATIONS.

An examination of the statistics of unemployment in the various occupations¹ discloses a very wide range in the percentages unemployed. In the same occupation there may be at one time practically no unemployment among the members of the organizations reporting, while at another time the percentage may reach a high figure. A comparison of the percentages for one occupation with those of another may also disclose a wide variation in the amount of unemployment in the occupations compared. Again, in certain occupations, the percentages unemployed may continue fairly constant for a long period, then abruptly rise to a high point. For the occupations in the building trades (carpenters, bricklayers, painters, etc.) much seasonal unemployment is usually reported at the close of March and December in each year.

While the percentages of unemployment by occupations may prove of comparative value in certain instances, they should be used with caution, particularly where comparisons are made between percentages in those occupations for which, owing to the small number of employees reporting, the returns may not have been properly representative. On the whole, comparisons based on percentages unemployed in the several more important industries are to be recommended in preference to comparisons on an occupational basis.

2. DISCUSSION OF UNEMPLOYMENT CHARTS.

Statistics relative to unemployment have been collected in several European countries and in New York State and Massachusetts for a number of years, but owing to the varying methods of collecting these statistics, and the differing sources from which they are obtained, the data for the several countries are not directly comparable with similar data obtained in Massachusetts and New York State.² The percentages unemployed on specific dates may, however, be used in plotting graphs showing the fluctuations in unemployment in the several countries during a period of years. For purposes of making a comparison of these fluctuations, the Bureau has prepared the chart appearing on the following page, showing graphically the extent to which the periods of industrial

² In New York State the collection of data of this character was discontinued after June, 1916.

* Collection of data discontinued after June, 1916 prosperity and depression in Massachusetts and New York State correspond with those in the United Kingdom and Germany. An examination of the chart shows a remarkable correspondence in the fluctuations of the several graphs, but it will be observed that the fluctuations in the graphs representing the returns for Germany and the United Kingdom are by no means as pronounced as the corresponding fluctuations in those representing the conditions in Massachusetts or New York State. This, no doubt, may be explained by the fact that the British and German returns refer to far larger numbers of employees than do the returns for New York State and Massachusetts, and consequently large variations in the numbers unemployed in a few industries do not affect the general percentages for those countries to the extent that similar variations would affect the percentages for New York State and Massachusetts.

The percentages used in plotting the Massachusetts graphs, of which there are two — the one representing unemployment for all causes and the other representing the percentages unemployed because of lack of work — have already been discussed in some detail,¹ but certain significant facts are brought out by the fluctuations in these graphs. Thus the graph representing unemployment for all causes shows, in general, a downward inclination from the high point in 1908 following the period of industrial depression until the end of the third quarter in 1911, interrupted, however, by upward fluctuations during the winter period of each year. In the Spring of 1912, it rose rapidly upward, this being due to the effect of the strikes of very large numbers of textile workers, notably those at Lawrence and Lowell. By the close of September, 1912, conditions had become much more normal, but after the close of 1912 there was an upward trend until, at the close of December, 1914, the highest point recorded during the entire period was reached, marking the climax of the period of industrial depression which began in the Fall of 1914 and continued through the Spring of 1915. In 1915 there began again a period of prosperity which is indicated by the downward trend of the graph during that year. Except for the usual upward fluctuation during the winter months this trend continued downward until the close of September, 1916, when the lowest point for the entire ten-year period was reached. The trend of the graph was then upward until the close of June, 1917 (the upward trend after the winter season having been due principally to a general strike of boot and shoe workers in Lynn). At the close of September, 1917, the graph again reached a low point, but moved upward a few points during the last quarter of the year.

The graph representing unemployment because of lack of work follows, in general, the trend of that for all causes, already described, and, usually, at a fairly constant distance below it. Exceptions to this rule are found at the high points reached at the close of March, 1912, and at the close of June, 1917, by the graph for all causes, due to the unemployment resulting, in the former case, from the series of textile strikes, and, in the latter case, to the general strike of boot and shoe workers in Lynn, to which reference has been made.

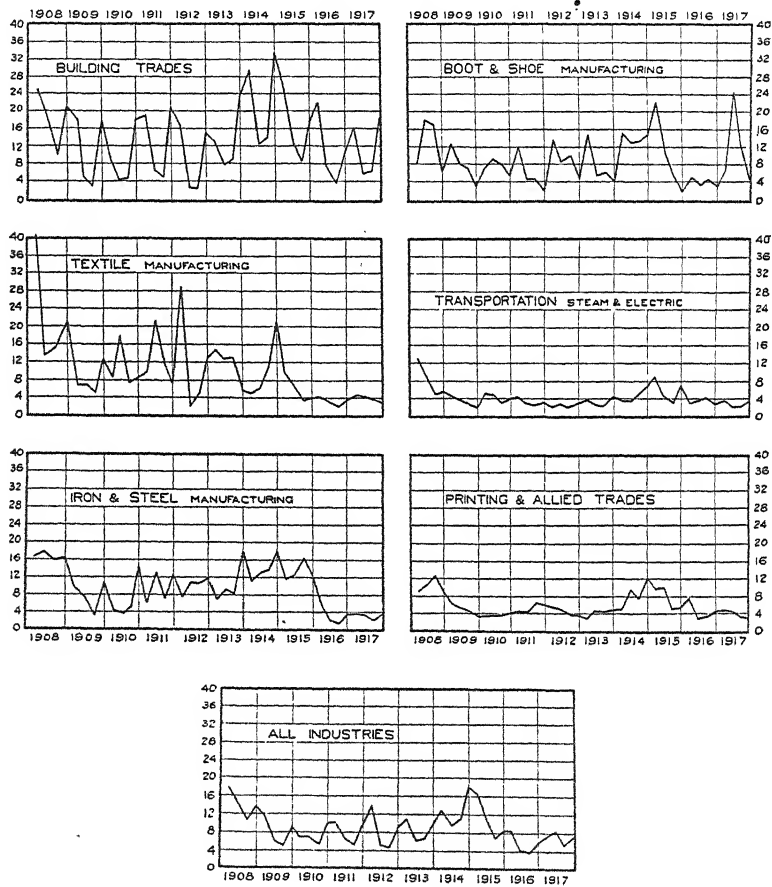

No comparison of the general level of the several graphs can properly be made, owing to the varying nature of the returns on which they have been based. The generally high level of the two graphs for New York State has been attributed to the relatively large representation in the returns for that State of certain trades in which usually there is apt to be considerable unemployment, as, for example, in the garment trades in New York City.

For the purpose of showing the fluctuations in unemployment in the principal industries of Massachusetts, the chart appearing on the following page has been prepared. In general, the graphs for the six principal industries follow the trend of the graph representing the fluctuations of unemployment in all industries. For convenience in making comparisons, the graph representing unemployment in all industries for all causes has been reproduced at the bottom of the chart.

Attention may be called to the more significant facts brought out by the fluctuations in the graphs for the respective industries. Thus in the case of the building trades, one will observe the effect of seasonal inactivity due to unemployment during the winter months. In boot and shoe manufacturing, "between seasons" periods are represented by high points occurring quite uniformly in the Spring of the year. In textile manufacturing no special uniformity in fluctuations will be observed. The high point in the Spring of 1912 represents for this industry the unemployment due to strikes in the principal textile centers, to which reference has already been made. The great demand for textiles for shipment to Europe in 1916 and 1917 is reflected in the uniformly low level followed by the graph in those years. The graph representing unemployment in transportation, with the exception of fluctuations upward at times of depression, shows a uniformly low percentage unemployed.

Marked fluctuations in the graph representing iron and steel manufacturing occurred, and the effect of the industrial depressions in 1908 and in 1914 and 1915 is very evident. There were no marked fluctuations in the graph representing printing and allied trades except those which were due to general industrial depression.

CHART III.—Percentages of Trade Union Members Unemployed in Massachusetts, 1908-1917: By Principal Industries.

By way of general summary, it may be stated that the transportation industry, and the printing and allied trades show usually less unemployment than any of the other branches, and even in times of depression, the proportion of wage-earners thrown out of work as represented by the percentages and by the upward fluctuations of the graphs, is by no means as large as in the case of the other industries. If the returns made by labor organizations may be taken as representative of conditions generally throughout the Commonwealth, the industries which should receive first consideration, in the order of their relative importance from the standpoint of the unemployment problem, would appear to be as follows: (1) Building trades; (2) textile manufacturing; (3) boot and shoe manufacturing; (4) iron and steel manufacturing; (5) printing and allied trades; and (6) transportation.

Lists of their affiliated local unions in Massachusetts and statements showing the aggregate membership of these locals were obtained in most instances from the national and international organizations at the close of 1916 and of 1917, and from each of the local unions in Massachusetts reports showing membership and other data were obtained at the close of each quarter in 1916 and 1917. The data relative to membership furnished by the local unions were checked up against similar data obtained directly from the national and international unions.

² At the close of 1917 there were 21 local unions having an aggregate membership of 3,831, and at the close of 1916 there were 29 local unions having an aggregate membership of 3,532, which were affiliated with two of the organizations listed in this table; consequently the totals for the State exceed the sum of the items appearing thereunder by the amount of these duplications.

¹ The high percentages reported as unemployed in the several cities to which this note refers were due, respectively, to the causes as stated below:—

Gloucester: March 31, 1916, strike of granite cutters, paving cutters and quarry workers; September 30 and December 30, 1916, lack of work in the granite industry; March 31, 1917, strike of fish workers.

Haverhill: June 30, 1917, lack of work in the boot and shoe industry.

Lynn: June 30, 1917, closing down of shoe factories in April pending negotiation of new wage agreement; September 29, factories reopened on September 24 were not being fully operated in all departments.

Quincy: March 31, 1916, strike of granite cutters; December 30, 1916, lack of work in the granite industry.
